

Two Fish On One Hook

by Steve Scott & Bill Chasey

Our planer board went down and the fight was on. Brought the catch next to the boat to be netted. Reach down to scoop up the Hybrid and revealed that there were two Hybrids in the net. One hooked and a follower.

One Fish On Two Hooks

as related by Jeff Groover

Our line went down on one side of the boat. While fighting the fish a second line went down on the other side of the boat. When both rods brought the fish into the boat, it was noted that the same fish had two hooks in its mouth exactly side by side.

The Eagle Story

by Alex Vasquez

While fishing near the S60 marker on the Seneca River, Tom Becker pointed out a big bird of prey high over head circling the boat. I saw the white tail and head and identified it as an eagle. As we were admiring the majestic bird, it made a dive for the big trout I had on an outside planer board. I reached for the rod, jerked hard, popping the board free and disengaged the reel, allowing the trout to dive away from the eagle's talons. It then flew low across our spread, this time to the medium trout out the back on a float and swept up the fish in the blink of an eye, screaming off drag like a freight train. As the line broke, the eagle flew into the treetops with 20 yards of mono trailing behind, and got in its lunch.
